Catalonia concentrates 32% of all camp-site tourism during November and stands as the first destination in the Spanish state

According to the Observatori de Turisme, a body attached to the Catalanian Ministry of Trade, Tourism and Consumer Affairs, during the month of November Catalonia lodged 32% of all camp-site travellers and registered 12% of all night stays

Monday, 2 January 2006.— During the month of November last, Catalonia stood as the most preferred camp-site tourist destination in the Spanish state. According to figures published by the Observatori de Turisme, during this period it registered 32% of all travellers and 12% of all night stays.

Catalonian camp-sites lodged 38,400 travellers during last November (16.6% less than those in the same dates in 2004). This volume of travellers generated a total of 83,700 night stays (an 0.7% inter-annual rise), and an average stay of 2.2 nights per traveller. Similarly, Catalonia's camp-site plot occupancy was one of 39.4% (involving a slight decrease of 5.3% compared to November 2004).

More than 2.6 Million, from January to November

Since the beginning of the year down to November, the camp-sites of Catalonia lodged 2.6 million travellers, which generated a total of 13.8 million night stays. The affluence of travellers decreased if compared to the same period in 2004 (a 6.9% decrease), but thanks to an extension of the average stay, the volume of night stays was slightly higher (1.5% more than from January to November in 2004).
